the post world war ii era was a tumultuous period in the world of psychiatry medical history has cast it as a clash between biology and psychoanalysis or as a time that lacked objectivism that is until the introduction of psychotropic drugs such as chlorpromazine which triggered a change in our treatment of mental health as profound and far reaching in its consequences as the war itself in the early years of this psychopharmacological revolution hallucinogens such as mescaline and lsd played as much of a role as other psychotropics in fact psychedelics constituted a scientific revolution in their own right one that does not however fit the narrative of twentieth century scientific history looking beyond the countercultural manifestations and references that have for decades obfuscated the psychedelic story historian p w barber delves into a serious examination of both the science and the people behind the research showing why and how this experimentation unfolded what its findings were and how these findings were received both within and outside the scientific community psychedelic revolutionaries completely resets a long misunderstood history by following the work of three pioneering psychiatrists humphry osmond who coined the term psychedelic and administered aldous huxley his first dose of mescaline abram hoffer and duncan blewett also known as the leary of the north while considering how it is that scientific discoveries become accepted as established truths barber invites us to ask what is it that makes a scientific discovery revolutionary psychedelics are part of a resurgence of interest in consciousness studies especially as altered states of consciousness are being re examined in the context of psychedelic assisted therapies to date discussions about psychedelics in modern medicine have been dominated by studies in biomedicine however given that cultural factors play a significant role in the subjective effects of psychedelics psychedelics can be considered a uniquely powerful point of convergence between the cultural and biomedical writers and artists alongside psychiatrists and pharmacologists have participated in shaping the psychedelic experience by drawing on a rich set of approaches that blend narrative arts and humanities concepts to explain and interpret psychedelic experiences and explore consciousness for creative purposes psychedelic studies past and present emphasize the importance of set and setting or the context of psychedelic consumption and its paramount importance in shaping psychedelic experiences these non pharmacological factors rely on a different set of methods and interpretations that necessarily rely on studies conducted outside of the biomedical sciences
